

What is co-governance?

Co-governance is not sharing the governance of New Zealand with another party.

No.

Co-governance replaces democracy.

It is a system which redistributes political rights.

It reduces the rights for the 83% non-Maori population and increases the rights for the 17% Maori population.

Crucially, co-governance enables a veto for Maori only, giving them ultimate power.

Thus, co-governance is quite different from co-management of a project.

It is vital that people understand this fact.

If the NZ sheeple are ready to cede rights and submit to the ultimate authority of a minority Maori, they should at least do so after studying a clear explanation.

As Winston Peters says, co-governance and democracy are different.

Maori politicians deliberately muddle these concepts e.g “tweaked democracy”, “sophisticated governance” etc

With democracy, the people, ultimately, have the final say.

With co-governance, Maori have the final say.

Maori will rule New Zealand. They will set the rules, monitor the rules, and enforce the rules.

There will be a select few Maori at the top of the tree, called elite Maori, exceedingly rich, who will act like chiefs of old, rulers, dictating what goes on, what is acceptable, and what is not acceptable.

They will control the finances and resources on the country.

There will be heavy Maorification.

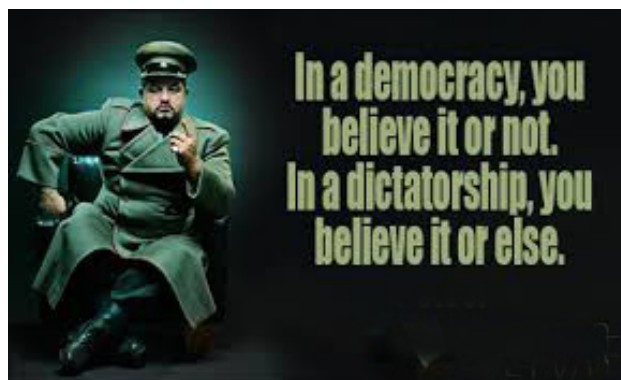

This means that Maori culture, Maori language, and Maori customs will be forced on the population.

There are currently 160 cultures living in New Zealand. They will all be required to “Maorify.”

The chiefs will not be able to be removed from office. They cannot be voted out. Only through death will they be replaced.

Elections, as we know them to be, will be no more.

There will be fighting among the various tribes for ascendancy.

Everyone other than the chiefs will be required to work hard and pay taxes to furnish their life style.

Essentially, all non-chiefs will become slaves.

Apartheid will rule and reign. Non-Maori will be second class citizens.

There will be a mass exodus out of New Zealand. Immigrants will not want to come here. Property prices will halve.

Public services rubbish collection will become intermittent.

Power cuts will increase.

Police corruption will be widespread.

Infrastructure will deteriorate markedly.

Many businesses will close.

Corruption at every level will be rampant.

Those left will be either the riff raff or those who just can't leave for various reasons.

This will be the new New Zealand, which will have a new name - Aotearoa.
